Reminders

- Each time we start a new math lesson, a parent letter comes home. You can find this letter in your child's Daily Folder in the "keep at home" side. The front page gives a brief overview of what we are working on that week, and the back gives a great suggestion for a math activity to do with your child. This activity will help to build number sense with your child. A child with higher number sense will have an easier time solving math problems in general.
- You can use this site to identify the AR level of any book your child is reading:
